'We lads of Offal Court do strive against each other with the cudgel, like to file fashion of the 'prentices, some times.'

The prince's eyes flashed. Said he:

'Marry, that would I not mislike. Tell me more.'

'We strive in races, sir, to see who of us shall be fleetest.'

'That would I like also. Speak on.'

'In summer, sir, we wade and swim in the canals and in the river, and each doth duck his neighbour, and spatter him with water, and dive and shout and tumble and-'

"Twould be worth my father's kingdom but to enjoy it once! Prithee go on."

'We dance and sing about the Maypole in Cheap-side; we play in the sand, each covering his neighbour up; and times we make mud pastry - we do fairly wallow in the mud, sir, saving your worship's presence.'

'Oh, prithee, say no more, 'tis glorious! If that I could but clothe me in raiment like to thine, and strip my feet, and revel in the mud once, just once, with none to rebuke me or forbid, me-seemeth I could forego the crown!'

II. Read the following extract from Bringing Tony Home and answer all the questions given below it.
"It moved like a great big animal almost silently, its engine making only a low humming sound, and it stopped where the road came back in a loop, the door with the eagles swung open and a white officer in a uniform of steel blue jumped out and closed the door hard. The truck pulled away towards kitchen No. 1 and the white officer leapt from the driveway into the verandah of his billet and disappeared inside. The truck came back along the loop and moved towards where it came from and as it disappeared among the trees the notes of a piano came floating from inside the billet where the white officer went; the music was vaguely familiar and the smell of roast beef was still in the air coming from Kitchen No.1 and I thought of the lonely nights I spent at 'Greenlands' in Havelock Town, where I slept on a bed in the huge dining room with all those portraits of my ancestors looking down on me from the high walls reaching all the way to the dark intricately carved wooden ceiling, and the smell of roast beef hung in the air and I would always hear the notes of a piano floating in from somewhere, playing strange and sad yet beautiful melodies and I would miss the warmth of my mother and cry silently into the crisp white bed sheets and pillow cases which were cold and smelled of starch and camphor." (i) When and where does this incident take place?
(ii) What sound and smell does the narrator experience at this place? (02 marks)

III. Read the following extract from The Vendor of Sweets and then answer all the questions given below it.
"Jagan gave a start on hearing this. He had never thought that the task would concern him. "How? How?" he asked anxiously, and before the other could collect his thoughts, added, "Don't think too much of me. No, no, after all, I'm a humble merchant."
The other said, "Why don't you buy this garden and install the Goddess?"
"I I do not know," replied Jagan, thickening his armour of self-defence, and tried to laugh the question off, but the other became deadly earnest, half rose, and waving a finger close to Jagan's eyes, said, "Very well, I understand. I only thought it would do you good to have a retreat like this."
"Yes, yes, God knows I need a retreat. You know, my friend, at some stage in one's life one must uproot oneself from the accustomed surroundings and disappear so that others may continue in peace."
"It would be the most accredited procedure according to our scriptures—husband and wife must vanish into the forest at some stage in their lives, leaving the affairs of the world to younger people."
Jagan felt so heartily in agreement that he wanted to explain why he needed an escape—his wife's death, son's growth and strange later development, and how his ancient home behind the Lawley Statue was beginning to resemble hell on earth—but he held his tongue. He felt shy and reserved about talking of his son—like one not wishing to exhibit his sores.
(i) When and where does the incident take place?

(ii) What is the speaker's intention in bringing Jagan to this place?
