The Schoolboy

by william Blake

I love to rise in a summer morn,
When the birds sing on every tree;
The distant huntsman winds his horn,
And the skylark sings with me;
O what sweet company!

But to go to school in a summer morn,
O it drives all joy away!
Under a cruel eye outworn,
The little ones spend the day
In sighing and dismay.

Get up and close the door.

It was a rainy evening. Peter and his wife Rose were at home. They were reading books. Their dinner was on the table. Lightning flashed. Thunder followed. It began to rain. Rose, Peter's wife shouted. "Peter please close the front door." "I'm reading an interesting novel," replied Peter. "Why can't you close the door?" "Don't be lazy, Peter. Get up and close the door." "I can't stop reading. Surely, you can close the door!"

"Not I. You are sitting doing nothing. I have work." Both Rose and Peter refused to move. The cold wind blew in. Peter was shouting at Rose. Rose raised her voice much more.

"You be silent. All right, whoever speaks first will go and close the door," said Peter.

Both of them agreed. They did not speak a word. Little later they heard some footsteps. Someone tapped on the door.

"Is anyone at home?" No one answered. Two men came in. "Look, There's a man," one said. "We got caught in the rain. Can we wait here till the rain stops?" Both Peter and Rose were silent. "Why don't they talk? What's wrong with them? Are they dumb?" One asked the other. "Look, there's food on the table. I'm hungry" said one. "I'm dying of hunger," said the other. "Come, let's have dinner." They sat down to eat. Peter looked at Rose, Rose stared at Peter. Both remained dumb. The men ate well.
